Weather Corner
By Jake Yurek

All we have to do is get by the first part of the week and things should settle in nicely.

An early week storm focused most of its precipitation to our north and southeast. I don’t write this is hasn’t happened yet, but I’m hoping any precipitation stayed away, as a few patches of freezing rain may have developed in the north, but mainly just a slushy blanket of snow. Temperatures dropped. By Wednesday lows may dip below zero with windy, chill winds rolling in from the northwest.

There is good news, though — it will be short-lived as a warm front will work back in Friday through Saturday lifting temperatures up into the 40s by Friday. Some indictions point at the storm moving into South Dakota, so we’ll see how close it can get, but it will feel pretty nippy.
Winds will still be up around north of freezing. With a slightly cold front expected early next week. We should see winds in the 20s and maybe, if not nippy, a wind chill some more by with some rain mixing in.

High pressure builds out early next week, so it should keep us in close to average with some storms avoiding the area.

Have a great February week, everyone!

Mi doby weekendem

Wednesday — Lows -3 to 3; clear.
Thursday — Highs 17-23; lows 20-23; clear.
Friday — Highs 30-36; lows 25-31; clouds.
Saturday — Highs 35-42; lows 20-26; rain mixing with snow late.
Sunday — Highs 32-38, partly cloudy.

Weather Quiz: Why have we seen more bouts of freezing drizzle and fog this year than we normally see?

Answer to last week’s question (I was recently asked again, why don’t the most precipitation and most snowfall for monthly extremes match up on any given month?): In winter, there’s typically a pretty fine line between rain and snow in the largest storms, so more often than not we get our biggest precipitation days in rain
and the snowfall days don’t quite add up to much.

Remember: I make the forecast, not the weather!

While many stayed in the clubhouse, most ventured out to promote the dairy industry and its products. Dairy princess candidates sought for Sibley County

The Midwest Dairy Association of Sibley County seeks dairy ambassadors for its 2017 Sibley County Dairy Princess competition. Dairy princesses serve as goodwill ambassadors for the dairy industry and take part in dairy promotions, media interviews, classroom presentations, parades and other public appearances to promote the dairy industry and its products.

A candidate must be a high school senior about to graduate or already be a graduate, unmarried, childless and not yet 24 years of age by July 1. A candidate also qualifies if she or her parents are employed on a dairy farm.

County dairy princesses are eligible to attend a statewide dairy princess promotion and leadership event to be held at St. Cloud State University. They may be selected as a finalist for the Princess Kay of the Milky Way title. Twelve finalists will be selected to compete for the title of Princess Kay of the Milky Way in August. Contestants are judged on their communications skills, personality, enthusiasm for dairy promotion and general knowledge of the dairy industry. Candidate entry deadline is March 5.
